The implementation of the Common Core State Standards has thrust education, particularly public education, into a spotlight that it has never been in before. This has been both good and bad. Education should always be a focal point for every American. Unfortunately, too many people take it for granted. A select few see no value in education at all.

Begin by asking students to identify with one side or the other of a contentious issue. This could be an issue that has arisen organically in class, or simply one that you want the students to discuss that day. Ask students belonging to one point of view to make a circle with their chairs in the middle of the room.

In recent years, technology has made it possible, and in some ways critical, for college and university presidents to increase campus-wide communication. Following the 2016 US presidential election, many college presidents across the country sent campus-wide communications in response to the election, while others chose not to respond. The resulting reactions from campus and community ...
